

AMERICAN INDIAN DOG

The American Indian Dog is bred according to the "Old Ways" of our "First People".

This is not an AKC breed. We have maintained our own registry for the past 45 years, in order to keep to our Elders' ways, thereby securing the exceptional health and unique qualities of this very special breed.

The American Indian Dog is a true representation of the Plains Indian Dog, the one that Lewis and Clark and many historians have written about - America's First Dog.

This breed bears the characteristics that were so important to our "First People": loyalty, versatility, and trainability. This is an intelligent, sentient dog, the way Nature intended. Adept at everything they are asked for, from babysitting to hunting, they are not for everybody. They require calm, assertive leadership, and are happiest when they have a job to do.
